

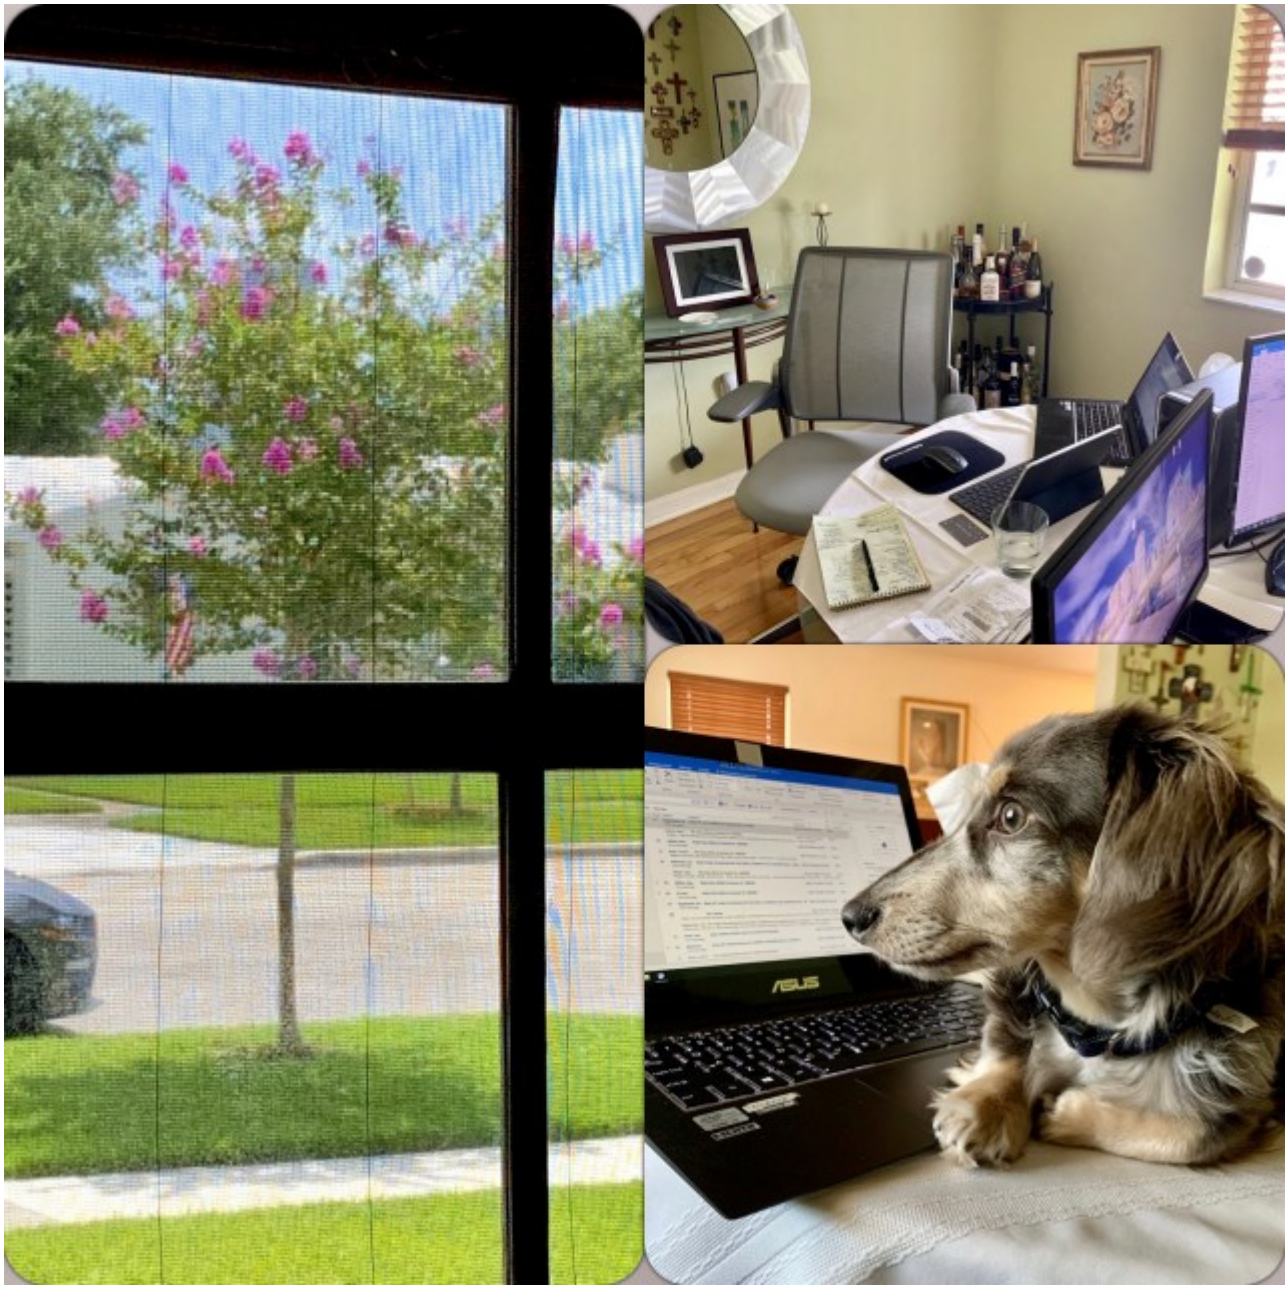
For interim spots.

The dining room has been their interim home office for four months now. She never would've imagined that, she said. Anyway, in this interim office, she has the best spot. It's next to the bar and faces the blooming Crape Myrtle. From this spot, she can see Amazon, UPS, FedEx, and USPS without wondering who that annoying thing they call the Ring camera is picking up. From this spot she also gets to see walk-by neighbors she didn't know she had. Me too! And I see Nelly, their cat, being Nelly. One day…just wait.

Lockdown sucks, but this view's not bad. I'm really enjoying it. For this spot, and the blessing that my human family is still employed, today I am thankful. – Beni Heinz Perez



What’s your lockdown spot like, and what are you thankful for today?

Until next Thursdays post…si Dios quiere.
