

I wonder if all those people opposing a commercial that promotes and celebrates life lifted a finger to support, either materially or spiritually, those souls perishing in Haiti after the earthquake. Their little regard for human life would make me think not. But if they did, they are hypocrites. I wonder, what can be so horrific about a 30-second ad that defends something as sacred as life, to people who I'm sure would do anything to preserve theirs? I wonder how offensive a short, miss-it-if-you-blink, pro-life ad can be amongst the filth that plays on TV nowadays? Heaven forbid!
It is a sad sad world we live in when so many appear to be so up in arms about something so morally on point with what our values should be.

"And if we can accept that a mother can kill her own child, how can we tell other people not to kill one another?"

> "Many people are concerned with children of India, with the children of Africa where quite a few die of hunger, and so on. Many people are also concerned about the violence in this great country of the United States. These concerns are very good. But often these same people are not concerned with the millions being killed by the deliberate decision of their own mothers. And this is the greatest destroyer of peace today- abortion which brings people to such blindness."
