

They light it up for communist China, for Sinatra’s birthday, and for the introduction of blue M&Ms, but they refuse to sport on this landmark the colors of a saintly Nobel Prize winner? Really?

I know, I know, complaining about something as trivial as lights when connected to this exceptional individual is absurd. I personally don’t need a building spectacle to remind me of her life’s work, and she certainly wouldn’t want this honor to begin with, I think. But it’s the principle of the matter. Why choose to honor an oppressive regime and not quite possibly the greatest humanitarian the world has ever seen? Head-scratching I tell you…

See: No lights for Mother Teresa

Share this:

- Share on Facebook (Opens in new window) Facebook
- Share on X (Opens in new window) X
- Share on Pinterest (Opens in new window) Pinterest
- Print (Opens in new window) Print