Thankful for the memories. “It’s a Small World” turns 50. I’m not gonna lie, the catchy tune drives me nuts now (how many of us haven’t gotten stuck in the ride? The boat stops but the music doesn’t!) As you get older, you either love it or hate it. But I can’t deny that it’s been part of many great memories for me. Just recently, my daughter and I videoselfied our sing-along while on the ride (I’ll spare you from that here). Yes, it was close to midnight, yes, it was part delirium, but, the ride was, once again, part of a memory maker. And today, for that I am thankful.
Here’s a video Disney put out in honor of the ride’s milestone celebration (go ahead, you know you wanna sing it

Today, all Disney Parks will celebrate the attraction’s 50th anniversary with a global sing-along by guests and cast members. Fans have been recording videos singing the song and uploading them to SmallWorld50.com. Disney will donate $1 to UNICEF for every video uploaded (up to $100,000) plus an additional donation of $150,000. You can also build a doll in the image of the It’s a Small World dolls and Disney will donate a buck to UNICEF for that, too.
