

For November days in the 305. It's crowded here, traffic's a bear, people are weird, but that's the case in most big cities. However, you can't beat the weather in Florida, especially during this time of year. And for that, I'm thankful.

Hasta next Thursday's post...si Dios quiere.

What are you thankful for today?

"I live in Florida, and when people ask how close to the beach I am, I say, 'Twelve minutes or twelve hours. Depends on which beach you want to go to.'"

-J. Kintz

We have thousands of opportunities every day to be grateful: for having good weather, to have slept well last night, to be able to get up, to be healthy, to have enough to eat. There's opportunity upon opportunity to be grateful; that's what life is.

-D. Steindl-Rast

—Outside my window this a.m.—

Share this:

- Click to share on Facebook \(Opens in new window\)
- Click to share on Twitter \(Opens in new window\)
- Click to share on Pinterest \(Opens in new window\)
- Click to print \(Opens in new window\)