

Last night we had the opportunity to spend time at home with the kids. After dinner, we watched a YouTube video of this beautiful home in this amazing setting, and imagined what it would be like to live in it. As we dissected every inch of the house, we made fun of the fact that our homes combined would probably fit inside one of its wings. You can imagine the price tag.

After much daydreaming and architectural and design discussion, we all agreed that our “real” homes are very nice. That they are great, actually, and that we are blessed. Our home, for instance, may not have double digit bedrooms and bathrooms, queen-size bunk beds, a bowling alley or double pizza ovens but, last night, it had all of us, including Danny who is in town. Last night, our home was furnished with love, laughter and hugs. And the price tag on that, my friends, reads “priceless.”

Never miss the opportunity to gather. For family time, I am eternally grateful.

What are you thankful for today?

Until next Thursday’s post...si Dios quiere.

“When you love what you have, you have everything you need.”

-Unknown

Share this:

- Click to share on Facebook \(Opens in new window\)
- Click to share on Twitter \(Opens in new window\)
- Click to share on Pinterest \(Opens in new window\)

- Click to print \(Opens in new window\)